Hon. Geo. and Mrs. Fain the guests of General and Mrs. Pickle, Clinch avenue, west.

Mortimer King of Canada with relatives in the city.

Miss Estelle Shook of Nashville is the guest of Miss Douglass.

Major Ezra Woodruff, U. S. A., the guest of Capt. and Mrs. Woodruff, Cumberland avenue, west.

Oliver Merrill of Boston visiting friends in this city.

Miss Ella Williams will remain during the weeks of winter with relatives.

Misses Florence Hastings of Chicago and May Wylie of Davenport, Iowa, are with the Misses Woodruff, Cumberland avenue, west.

Miss Mildred Thompson of Indiana the guest of Wm. B. and Mrs. Lockett, Hill avenue, west.

Hiram Wylie and George Middleton of Iowa and Oliver Merrill of Boston the guests of friends in this city.

Returned.

Judge and Mrs. Joseph Sneed from a visit to Nashville.

Miss Annie Beach from a stay of two weeks with friends in Philadelphia and New York.

Mrs. Beauford McKinney from Mossy Creek, where she was the guest of relatives.

John Caldwell from a business trip South.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Sanford from their bridal tour east.

Hon. S. G. and Mrs. Heiskell from a brief visit to Newport.

R. R. Swenson and niece, Mrs. Jeanette D. Cowan, from a visit to North Carolina.

Miss Gertrude Virtue from a visit to relatives in St. Paul, Minn.

Joseph T. McTeer from a business trip to the east.

It is with much interest Knoxville friends—and they are legion—welcome the return of Mrs. T. O. Deaderick for quite a visit. As "Josie Heiskell" she held a very special territory in the hearts of her fellow-townpeople. It was a blow to the educational, musical and social life of Knoxville when Prof. "Tom" Deaderick left to make his home elsewhere. Mrs. Deaderick is visiting her brother, Mr. Samuel Heiskell, at Hotel Flanders.

Mrs. H. R. Gibson, who has made her home in Washington of late, has been in the city for several months and will remain yet a month longer. Mrs. Gibson's departure left a void in the literary and social life of Knoxville. As ex-President, and always interested member of Ossoli Circle, her absence has made itself especially felt. We do not wish either the Congressman or his wife anything in the nature of misfortune, but it will be a pleasant day for Knoxville when Mrs. Gibson returns to once more identify herself with club interests. Mrs. Gibson is a deep thinker and a writer of exquisite delicacy and yet of great force. It is with pride and pleasure THE ECHO announces Mrs. Gibson as one of its future contributors. Her exceptional opportunities to watch and mingle with the varied life at the capital pledge letters of much personal value to our readers.

Hereafter a directory of all the women's clubs will be kept standing.

Departures.

George W., Jr., and Mrs. Cable, for their bridal tour East, and later to their future home in Davenport, Iowa.

Misses Ault, Wade, Moss and White to Richmond, where they attended the Confederate memorial exercises.

Archibald Wilcox to his home in Columbus, Ga., after a brief stay with friends in this city.

Mrs. Maggie Jones Hooper to Washington, having visited several days in the city among friends.

John R. and Mrs. Jarnagin to Tate Springs, after a few days' visit here.

Miss Etta Young for "Eagle Bend," after a visit to John E. and Mrs. Chapman, Kingston pike.

John W. James, of Philadelphia, after a week's visit to Harry K. Wood, Main avenue, west.

William and Mrs. Mead for New York and a tour of Europe, sailing November 15th on the Oceanic.

Jos. Branch, of St. Louis, having visited friends in this city a few days.

Mesdames Samuel McKinney, Jos. T. McTeer, J. H. Hensley, H. W. Curtis, M. E. Lloyd, G. W. Lambright, A. K. Selden, for Richmond, where they attended the unveiling of the Winnie Davis monument.

Frank S. and Mrs. Mead to New York and a tour of several months through Europe.

T. M. Michaels for a visit to friends in Richmond, Va.

Mrs. R. P. Gettys for a visit of several weeks in Nashville.

Mrs. Wingfield, after a visit to Andrew R. and Mrs. Humes, to relatives in Virginia.

Miss Lena Gaut, of Morristown, returned home, after a visit to relatives.

Miss Lillian Mason for Greeneville to spend the months of winter.

Robert and Mrs. Bingham and little son, of Louisville, Ky., to Asheville, where they will be the guests of Col. Bingham.

Mesdames J. Neil Mitchell and Jas. A. Duncan for Washington, to visit Mrs. Hooper.

Charles and Mrs. Ringgold and children for Kentucky, to visit relatives.

Reuben S. and Mrs. Payne for Mexico and California, where they will remain several weeks.

Coming Events.

Miss Lida Sneed will have as her guests very soon two charming belles from Louisiana.

Miss Alice Yoe is expected to arrive home early next week from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Patton, in Nashville.

The young gentlemen of the Cotillion Club will entertain with an elaborate German Friday night next in the club rooms.

Miss Temple will visit Birmingham Monday and Tuesday of the coming week, and will deliver an address before the Congress of Women.

Tuesday, November 14th, will be a memorable date in the social history of Knoxville, as at that time Miss Annie Dee McClung will make her triumphal entrance into society's realm. Hon. A. J. and Mrs. Albers and Miss Annie Dee McClung will receive between the hours of four and nine at their handsome residence, Main avenue, west.

Matters Social.

Special mention must be made of the Thanksgiving Market, under the auspices of the ladies of the First Presbyterian Church. It will be held two days before Thanksgiving, on Gay street. The exact location will be mentioned later. There will be for sale jellies, tempting pickles of all kinds; crisp, flakey mince-pies and other dainties appropriate to the season. The famous cooks of the old First church are too well known to need any recommendation. Their work speaks for itself.

Wednesday evening Captain and Mrs. Woodruff entertained at dinner the bridal party and the visiting relatives in the city to attend their daughter's wedding. There were present Maj. Ezra Woodruff, U. S. A.; Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Clapp, Mrs. Meek and Captain and Mrs. Woodruff; Misses Wylie, Hastings, Johnston of Kentucky, McMullen, Ijams, Gettys, and the Misses Woodruff; Messrs. Cable, Wylie, Middleton, Coykendall, Woodruff, McClung and Dr. Edgerton; Mr. and Mrs. Cable, parents of the groom, and the best man, Mr. Merrill, of Boston.

The hospitable McMullen home was again thrown open last evening, the occasion being a dinner party tendered the Woodruff-Cable bridal party by Miss Iva McMullen, one of the attendants. There were present only the bridesmaids and groomsmen and one or two of the charming visiting girls now in the city. The table was beautifully covered by an elegant rose-pink damask cloth, the candles and the big chrysanthemums catching the rosy glow of the background, while here and there about the table fairy-like doilies held dishes of candies and bonbons, all in the same pretty tinting. The ices and cakes were big pink chrysanthemums, and wherever possible the color idea was carried out. Miss McMullen's entertainments are always notably charming and characteristic of her ideal hospitality.

The friends of Mrs. J. Erwin Borches, have recently been granted the privilege of viewing her beautiful wedding gifts which were tastefully arranged at her new home, on tables, lighted by candles held by superb candelabra, among the gifts. One of the most noticeable presents was a solid silver chafing-dish, stand, lamp, hot-water, and cooking pans, given by Governor Hastings. It is unique, impressive. Attracting attention next were the solid, silver vegetable dishes, four in number, and four tall, elegant, old-fashioned looking candlesticks, reminding one of "ye colonial days;" a case of silver, containing twelve dozen of spoons, forks and knives, the gift of the groom's parents, in the stylish new dull finish; also the silver service of six large pieces, the gift of the bride's mother, next claimed our notice. Then one was fairly bewildered by the dazzling array of glittering cut-glass, odd pieces of bric-a-brac, silver in greatest profusion and all designs; fancy work, pictures, etc., all attesting the popularity of this fortunate young couple. It is extremely difficult to specify from the more than three hundred beautiful articles, all lovingly tendered the happy young girl whom Knoxville so gladly welcomes.

Tuesday afternoon the Douglass home, in West End, was thrown open to guests, the hours being four and six for the married ladies; then later, at nine, the younger people assembled to welcome to their ranks a fair addition, Miss May Douglass. And a right royal entrance it was. The pretty home, recently enlarged and remodeled, was fittingly adorned. Large jars of heavy-headed white and gold chrysanthemums, fit tributes to youth and innocent maidenhood, nodded a graceful welcome from mantels and corners. Glowing crimson roses, hinting of a beautiful realization of womanhood, peeped from behind the long line of fresh, eager faces, in vain rivalry. In the dining-room silver candelabra held a myriad of blush-tinted candles, on mantel, buffet and cabinets, while the table, simple, but elegant, was lovely with a huge bowl of luscious pink chrysanthemums overshadowing the dainty lace doilies and pink mats.

At the corners more pink candles, in ribbon-decked holders, stood aglow. From above the strains of rich music rose and fell and filled the house to overflowing with melody. Mrs. Douglass, and her daughter, a worthy representative of a lovely mother, received the guests, the former in a handsome gown of daintily-flowered white silk and pink chiffon, while the debutante was like a tall young lily, her pretty head rising from a cloud of purest white chiffon, unrelieved by any color save the changing light of dancing brown eyes and happily flushed cheeks. Assisting were their three attractive guests, Misses Nabb and Woolsey, of Alabama, and Miss Shook of Nashville, and three of our own girls, debutantes all—Misses Annie Dee McClung, Rosannah Rodgers and Mary Lou McMullen. Further assisting the hostess and entertaining the guests were Mesdames Woodruff, Harrison, Hazen, Oates and Baine, who with their gracious cordiality and tact added much to the pleasure of all.

Cable-Woodruff Wedding. One of the most delightful things that can be said of Miss Katherine Woodruff's wedding, which occurred Thursday evening, is, that with all its elegance and beauty of detail, it carried out the bride's idea and was a sweet, old-fashioned wedding. From the big white chrysanthemum bell, ringing back to us a melodious memory of "ye good old days," on through the beautiful supper, with the really delicious edibles, down to the dearly loved orange-blossoms plentifully adorning the bride's gown, all through there was a touch of what was loveliest and most appropriate for a young girl's home wedding.

Promptly at nine o'clock the white ribbons were extended to form a passage, and to the soft strains of music from the hidden orchestra the wedding party descended the wide stairs. First the near relatives and visiting friends, who took their places in the large drawing-room, forming a welcoming semi-circle. Next Dr. Egerton, who performed the ceremony, followed closely by the groomsmen, Messrs. Coykendall, McClung, Middleton, Woodruff, Wylie. Then the bridesmaids, Misses Anne Gettys, Martha Ijams, Iva McMullen and Mary Wylie, who with the groomsmen formed a smaller semi-circle in front of the larger.

Miss Pauline Woodruff as first bridesmaid never looked better, in a rose-pink brocaded satin, daintily trimmed in tiny ruffles of white chiffon and pink roses. When the maid of honor, the youngest Miss Woodruff, joined the party the two sisters awaited the bride's coming at the drawing-room door. The scene after the bride had descended with her father and the groom,

Mr. Cable and the best man, Mr. Merrill, had met them under the bridal-bell, presented a picture long to be remembered by the hundreds of friends who thronged to do homage to sweet Katherine Woodruff, whom many had watched develop into the charming girl she is today.

The brides dresses were soft white net over white silk, the skirts trimmed in ribbon-edged ruffles, put on like a succession of large rose petals. And very like flowers they were themselves, with the dear little pink roses trimming bodices, and covering the quaint, tight, short sleeves. They all carried big bunches of white chrysanthemums.

Miss Margaret Woodruff's dress was of soft white Liberty chiffon, the entire dress, skirt and low waist a mass of daintiest tiny puffs, while a large white satin lily at one shoulder was no fairer than the face it caressed. The dress was vastly becoming, the soft folds clinging to the girlish form as though they loved their abiding place.

But the bride, with her pretty flushed cheeks and the light of happiness in her eyes but half hidden under the masses of tulle, in her elegantly simple satin gown with Bertha of rarest lace, was the one perfect touch of high light needed to complete the picture. She was a sweet bride, a tender, womanly bride, withal an old-fashioned one: with her bright smile and word for all, her gentleness and sympathetic graciousness, there has rarely been so young a girl with such a number of real friends.

We give her up reluctantly, but with a feeling of pleasure that Knoxville will have such a worthy representative in far-away Iowa.

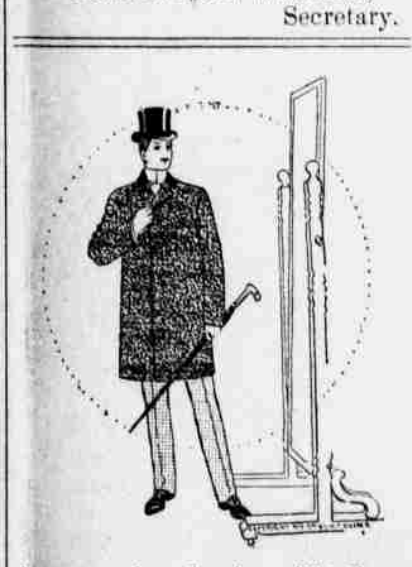

The bridal table was covered with a snowy damask cloth, and here and there lace doilies. Numberless candles, in silver candelabra, flung their white lights cheerily over the immense bowl of white chrysanthemums, or gleamed fairy-like through the filmy meshes of the white tulle suspended from the chandelier and fastened at each corner of the table with a single large chrysanthemum.

The presents received by this fortunate young couple were beautiful and numerous. The bride's veil was fastened by the exquisite diamond sunburst, the gift of the groom, while on one large table among the presents was the case containing the complete set of heavy silver, the remembrance from Capt. and Mrs. Woodruff. Near by were two attractive pictures of the charming home in Davenport, just completed, the gift from the groom's parents. The table of curios, statuettes, old bric-a-brac, was especially beautiful and interesting, and many expressions of wonder and admiration were heard at the collection. An especially noticeable present, was the handsome yellow silk table cloth, hand embroidered in designs of cranes, the product of Liberty's shops in Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Cable left Thursday night for the East. After a short trip they will go to Davenport.

The Christmas Bazar. Arrangements for the Christmas Bazar, to be given by the Hospital Board, and the Woman's Building Board, are progressing in a most satisfactory manner. This promises to be the largest and most unique entertainment of its kind ever given in Knoxville. It will be held Dec. 13th, 14th and 15th.

Woman's Building Association. The adjourned meeting of the stockholders of the Knoxville Centennial Building Association will be held in the Woman's Building, Tuesday, Nov. 14th at 3 p. m. LIZZIE NELSON WILLIAMS, Secretary.

A moment's reflection will tell you why our OVERCOATS are superior to the usual ready-made garment.

If you can't see it from the outside, look at the inside. If you fail to see its superiority there, show it to your wife, or some one's sister; women appreciate the best workmanship in garments.

Draperies

AND DRAPING.

No feature of our business has been more appreciated the past year than the Draping Department. One reason is because we have such an abundance of beautiful things that no other store would think of carrying. Another reason is because we understand draping. Our patrons do not find us helpless when something original and artistic is wanted. Copying is not difficult for anybody, we should judge; but copying we leave to others. Originating is our specialty.
